Program Leader

Experience

Jessica Weiss was drawn to Decker because of its many similarities to her career in psychology. She loves that it is based on empirically-validated principles and that it helps individuals make specific behavioral changes. She is fascinated by the power of video feedback and gets such a thrill out of seeing how the Decker program transforms communication skills.

Jessica holds a Ph.D in Clinical Psychology from St. John's University. She owns her own private practice, where she treats individuals with anxiety disorders and depression. She helps her patients work on specific therapeutic goals, and often brings them outside of the office to expose them to anxiety-provoking stimuli—subways, elevators and even the Brooklyn Bridge.

Jessica has worked with executives and leadership teams at: Agilent Technologies, Concur Technologies, Direct Energy, Helmsley Charitable Trust, Hilton, MedeAnalytics, Merrill Lynch, NYC Department of Health & Mental Hygiene, Pfizer, Sephora, State Farm Insurance, Stryker, T. Rowe Price, TripAdvisor and VMware.

Jessica lives in Manhattan, NY, with her husband and two boys. As a family, they enjoy biking, traveling, cooking and building robots.
